

Week 7: Room Palette Color Theory

I decided to go with a palette for a bedroom or living room. I went to "Art in Bloom" at the MFA here in Boston on Friday and took lots of pictures of the art-inspired bouquets - there were many very good color palettes. I found the colors in this one to be very calming and something I would like in a bedroom or another relaxing room.

Below shows how I would use the colors. The pale grey/greens for the walls and moldings and grey/brown for the floor and wood furniture. The blues would be for wall art and bedding or upholstered items.

There is minimal contrast in this palette, which makes it ideal for a relaxing room. The color that stands out the most is the darker blue, and this is why it is an accent color.
